BITTEN BY A PET CAT, MAN DIES OF RABIES AFTER SEVEN WEEKS

Jurgensen Had Convulsions Four Days Before Receiving Medical Attention.

Hans Jurgensen, fifty years, & watchman whose home was at No. 11 Fourth Place, Brooklyn, is dead today of hydrophobia in the Long Island College Hospital as the result of a cat bite received seven weeks

Jurgensen had suffered four days from convulsions before he was removed to the hospital yesterday morning for his first medical aid. The watchman, who was employed on a South Brooklyn pier, returned to his boarding house one afternoon about seven weeks ago and told of the loss of his pet cat. The animal, he said, had kept him company in his shanty. but had apparently gone crazy and run away the night before.

"Pete acted queer and when I tried to pet him he bit me on the hand," Jurgensen told another boarder. Apparently be paid little attention to the wound on his hand, for he pever spoke of it afterward.

On Tuesday last he was seized with a slight convulsion. It soon passed off and, believing it due to a stomack disorder, he did not seek a physician. On the following day Jurgensen had three more convulsions, yet no physician was called to attend him. Early yesterday in returning home from his work he was stricken in the hall. A fellow boarder summoned a policeman and an ambulance was called. Dr. Buchanan of the Long Island College Hospital diagnosed the case as hydrop. ola. Several spe-cialists and Dr. Frank S. Fielder of the Health Department verified the diagnosis and the Pasteur treatment was begun. But it was too late.
